PCS Edventures gets Korean pact

Boise's PCS Edventures will provide curriculum to a Korean educational institute and provider of educational products, under an agreement signed this week.

The agreement was signed with Kang Nam Education Agency, which provides products to the K-12 market in Korea, including about 1,300 private and public schools.

PCS will translate the content of its curriculum products so it will be available in Korean and English at the same time.

"We are very pleased that the Kang Nam Education Agency has selected our curriculum for use in Korea after looking at curriculum across the United States and in the United Kingdom," said Tony Maher, chairman, president and chief executive officer of PCS.

"After much searching, we found the PCS curriculum and on-line product and services on the Web," said Myoung Kyu Lee, president of the Kang Nam Agency in Seoul.
